GAUCHO CULTURE

In South America and especially in Argentina and Uruguay, the “Gaicho” can be referred to as a ‘country person, experienced in traditional livestock farming’. But also in Paraguay and Brazil you will find Latin-American cattle Sheppard’s.

Another tradition which is shared across South America is grilling beef over open fires. In Spanish referred to as ‘Asado’, in Brazil it is called ‘Churrasco’.

CATTLE BREEDS

In Uruguay the biggest breeds are Hereford and Angus.

Typical cattle breeds in Argentina are Hereford, Angus, Shorthorn and Charolais.

In Paraguay and southern Brazil you will find British breeds crossed with Zebu and in Brazil white Zebu breed accounts for over 80% of the national herd.

New Zealand

New Zealand's fertile lowlands deliver the perfect combination of lush pasture, clean water and long sunshine hours for consistently growing the highest quality grass-fed prime steer. The cattle are raised completely naturally. This combination creates maximum tenderness with a distinct full flavour taste.

Our main brand for New Zealand Prime Steer is Wilson Hellaby. Great Meat delivered With Pride, with a proud history that can be traced back to 1873, the Wilson Hellaby brand represents a long tradition of quality, innovation and service.
